Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Two Navy submarine-hunting planes collided Thursday, and all 27 people aboard were feared dead in cold, choppy waters 60 miles off Southern California, authorities said.

The Navy listed the crews as missing, but there was little hope any of the crew members from the downed P-3 Orions survived.

The all-weather planes were engaged in an anti-submarine warfare training exercise when they collided in bad weather, authorities said.

"I think we have to be realistic here," said Senior Chief Petty Officer Bob Howard, a Navy public affairs officer at North Island Naval Air Station.

"It is very cold out there. We're talking about what apparently is a mid-air collision ... two aircraft. I would say it would be very grim."

Still, he said, the Navy was conducting an aggressive air and sea search of the crash site.

Search and rescue teams spotted some debris from the planes but found no signs of life.

There was no word on how long the search would last, but Howard said the Navy would make "extraordinary" attempts to retrieve remains and wreckage.

A Navy helicopter crew flying in the area and sailors from the destroyer USS Merrill all reported a ball of fire and loud explosion at about 3:30 a.m., Howard said during a briefing at North Island Naval Air Station.

He said the accident occurred over the Pacific Ocean about 60 miles southwest of San Diego.

"They were operating in conjunction with other surface and air elements when a mid-air explosion was reported approximately the same time radio contact was lost," Howard said.

The collision occurred as one P-3 Orion was arriving to relieve the other, which had just completed its part of the exercise, Howard said. Officials were uncertain how much contact the pilots had before the crash, he said.

Howard said it was believed 13 crew members were aboard one P-3 Orion and 14 on the other.

The P-3s were in contact with land- and sea-based air controllers during the exercise, but officials were uncertain who was directing them.

Saddam wages chemical war

Opposition reports use of acid and napalm

Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Iraqi opposition groups claimed Thursday that Saddam Hussein's loyalist forces were using acid, napalm and chemical weapons to crush Kurds in northern and Shiite Muslims in the south rebelling against his rule.

The Iraqi troops have tried to cut off supplies of food and medicine to areas held by the insurgents, and Iraqi tanks, planes and helicopters also have attacked rebel-held northern oil fields, setting wells ablaze, the opposition said.

Ahmad al-Najjar's official news agency said the Tehran government strongly protested Iraq's reported abduction of the world's highest Shiite authority.

Also Thursday, an Iraqi delegation began talks with allied officials in the Saudi capital of Riyadh on speeding up the repatriation of Iraqi prisoners of war. Iraq freed 1,150 Kuwaitis in compliance with cease-fire terms.

The opposition Iraqi Kurdistan Front, in a statement released to Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, said the leader of the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan sent a message to the U.N. secretary-general seeking an urgent Security Council meeting on the Iraqi uprising.

IRNA said the letter from the Kurdish leader, Jalal Talabani, cited the torching of the oil wells and the use of napalm.

It said he urged the Security Council to "act resolutely to prevent Saddam Hussein's forces from persisting in these acts of gross environmental terrorism and to prevent the indiscriminate destruction of civilian areas by Hussein's forces."

Kuwaitis torture detainees

Associated Press

KAUWAIT CITY — Kuwaiti security forces and free-lance gangs are using lighted cigarettes, knives and other instruments to torture hundreds of people suspected of collaborating with Iraqi troops, a human rights group said Thursday.

The body of a man apparently tortured to death was found in a Kuwaiti neighborhood, the second corpse to appear in the area in recent days. U.S. officers at the scene said American officials were urging the Kuwaitis to investigate numerous human rights abuses.

Middle East Watch, a New York-based group, said about 30 to 40 people have been killed since the U.S.-led coalition forces drove Iraqi troops out of the emirate three weeks ago.

"We have interviewed people who described torture techniques which are very similar to those perpetrated by the Iraqis on the Kuwaitis," said Andrew Whitley, executive director of Middle East Watch.

About 2,000 people are being held, and many have been abused, Whitley said. Many detainees are Palestinians, who claim they are being victimized as a group because some of them assisted the Iraqis during the occupation.

Health programs facing problems with aged, ethnic groups, families

By PAUL D. EDDINGTON
Universe Staff Writer

Three social trends are causing health program problems in America, the U.S. assistant secretary of Health and Human Services said Thursday.

The number of citizens over the age of 65, the ethnic composition of citizens in the U.S. and the change in the traditional family structure make up the three trends, James O. Mason said.

growing faster than the number of citizens under 65," Mason said.

The United States is spending $100 billion a year on medical care for senior citizens. "By the year 2000, there may not be enough working Americans to support those who are retired," Mason said.

"According to research, of the 2.2 million Americans who turned 65 in 1990, 42 percent will be living in a nursing home before they die. You will probably be taking care of your parents longer than they took care of you," he said.

During the '80s, the percentage of white Americans in the United States decreased from 83 to 80 percent. During the same time, Hispanics, blacks and Asians in America experienced substantial increases in population.

"Ethnic groups, in general, have a higher mortality rate than whites," Mason said.

"Black children are twice as likely to die in the first year of life than white children," Mason said. "The high mortality rate among blacks, Hispanics and American Indians is not due to genetics; it is due to unhealthy behaviors."

Mason attributed some of the health problems experienced by different cultures in America to poverty, but he said there are other factors involved.

"For example, 35 percent of all blacks smoke, compared to only 27 percent of whites," Mason said.

Change in the traditional family structure is also causing serious health problems, Mason said. "Today only 7 percent of Americans are part of a traditional Wally Cleaver family." He said children from non-intact homes are more likely to be violent and use drugs.

Cold fusion is still a hot topic

By PAUL D. EDDINGTON
Universe Staff Writer

Tomorrow will mark the two year anniversary of the announcement of discovery of cold fusion, and as scientists still research the validity of the cold-fusion claims, critics continue to debate whether or not cold fusion actually works.

Steven E. Jones, a professor of physics at BYU, spoke Thursday night about the events that have occurred since that announcement.

On March 23, 1989, two chemists from the University of Utah, Stanley Pons and Martin Fleischmann, announced they had been able to create fusion at room temperatures. The announcement was made in Salt Lake City at a news conference that was covered world wide. Since then, research has been done that almost entirely disproves their claims.

Sunday's "New York Times" had a front page story on the controversial cold-fusion issue. The article written by William J. Broad suggested that not only was the discovery faulty in its scientific conclusions but that it was also faulty in the ethics and procedures used to report the findings.

Jones agreed with Broad in his address at the Sigma Xi annual awards lecture held in the Ernest L. Wilkinson Center.

Jones has been involved in extensive cold-fusion research since he came to BYU in 1985. In his address to the Sigma Xi club, Jones said, "There is a vast difference between the approaches and claims of Pons and Fleischmann and those of BYU."

"It's kind of sad when you think about what has happened with cold fusion over the past two years," Jones said. "It would have been wonderful if they had actually produced heat from cold fusion."

When Pons and Fleischmann made their claims two years ago, they failed to go through the accepted channels of approval, Jones said. Instead of sending copies of their findings to peers for evaluation and confirmation, "they made an end-run and went straight to the media," Jones said.

"I feel very safe in saying that the heat from the Pons/Fleischmann experiment is not fusion. I feel that there is some heat there, but it is not coming from fusion," Jones said.

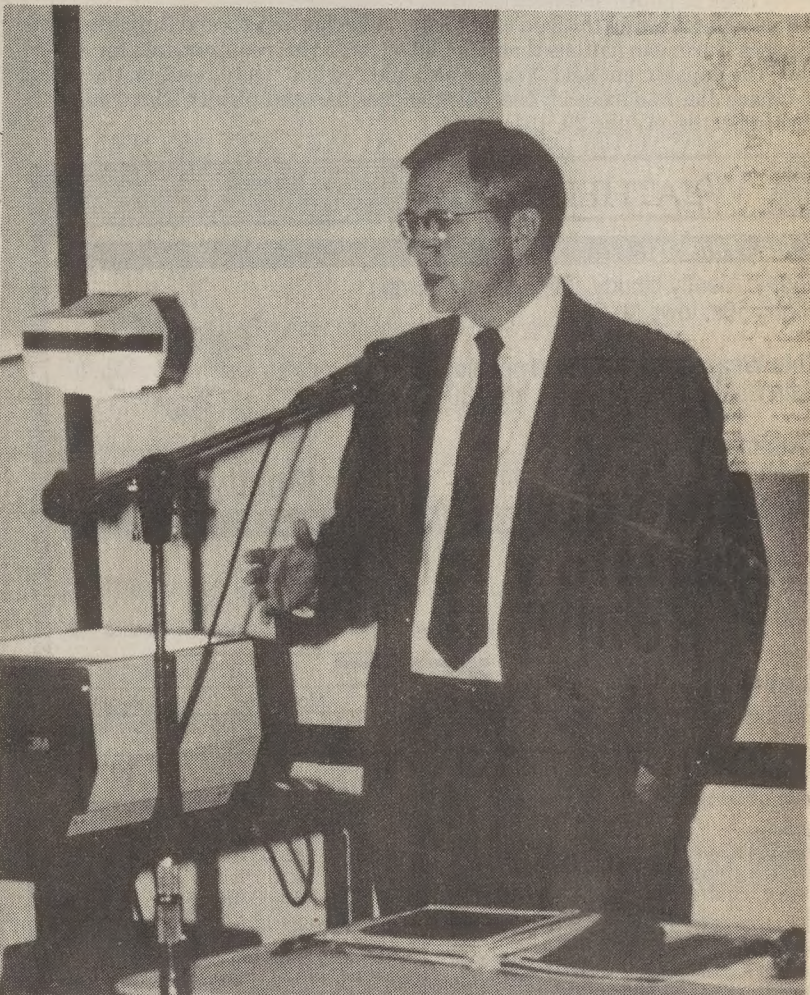

Shortly after the announcement, Jones and his colleagues at BYU were accused of stealing Pons and Fleischmann's idea for the so-called test-tube fusion.

"That was just not the case," Jones said. "We had been working on our own fusion experiments since early 1986."

During the past two years, fusion research has continued at BYU with the help of other research institutes. The basis of the research is in muon-catalyzed fusion, something Jones has been working on with funding from the U.S. Department of Energy for several years.

"Although we have not been able to create enough energy to solve the energy problems of the world, we do feel encouraged with what we have been able to do," Jones said.

Richard Woodbury, professor of electrical engineering and Sigma Xi president-elect, said Sigma Xi has sponsored similar meetings throughout the year for the purpose of advancing scientific research through the recognition of those performing good work.

Magazine scam unfolds in Utah County

By CHARLIE GIDDLEY
Universe Staff Writer

At least 12 BYU students and Provo residents have called their checking institutions to stop payment on checks they gave to a woman who claimed she was selling magazines.

Craig Anderson, member accounting clerk of Universal Campus Credit Union, said at least nine customers have called to stop payment on checks made out to a "Joe Prestridge."

The North University Office of First Security Bank, stopped payment Thursday afternoon on three checks made out to the same name, said Carol Luedtke, account representative.

Christine Honeycutt, of the Americana Apartments in Provo, said a young woman claiming to be from California came to her door Wednesday afternoon saying that if she earned 20,000 points selling magazines, she would win a free trip to anywhere she wanted to go.

Honeycutt said she was not interested in buying any magazines, but the young woman asked Honeycutt to help her out in the contest by issuing her a check and filling out an order form as if she were going to order.

Then the woman promised she would cancel the order, and the check would be returned, Honeycutt said.

When Honeycutt asked her why the check was to be made out to Joe Prestridge, the woman said he was her supervisor in charge of the contest.

One of Honeycutt's neighbors, Karen Patterson, whose husband is a BYU student, said she didn't think the woman's business was fraudulent, "but I didn't like her. She was very, very persistent."

Patterson said the woman told her she was going to win the contest and that she was going to be "the best-looking winner they'd ever had."

The woman was not highly educated but was highly trained, Patterson said.

Janice Chatterly, another neighbor and BYU student, said her husband also wrote a check out to the woman to help her win the contest. He did not intend to buy a magazine.

Luedtke said a man claiming to be Joe Prestridge came into the bank with identification and cashed checks for which payment hadn't been stopped.

Exxon could pay off its $1 billion settlement for much less

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Exxon's agreement to pay $1 billion to settle government claims and charges for the nation's largest oil spill could actually cost the company less than half that amount, an Associated Press analysis shows.

The company's cost would be reduced if it chose to purchase an annuity that would guarantee the 10 future annual payments called for under the settlement in the Exxon Valdez case — a growing business practice. Exxon's cost would be further cut because most of the payments are tax deductible.

The AP calculations, based on an actual market quotation for an annuity, show it could cost Exxon as little as $486.3 million to meet its obligations to repair the damage caused when the supertanker ran aground.

It spilled 11 million gallons of crude oil in Alaska's Prince William Sound in March 1989.

In Houston, Exxon spokesman Bill Smith had no comment on the calculations or the current value of the settlement.

Last week, Attorney General Dick Thornburgh proudly announced a $1 billion settlement by Exxon that included record criminal fines and civil damages.

But the settlement drew skepticism at a congressional hearing Wednesday.

"In essence, a lot of taxpayers' money is going back into this to pay Exxon's share," Rep. George J. Hochbrueckner, D-N.Y., said at a House merchant marine committee session.

The Congressional Research Service used three different estimates of how much investments might earn over the next 10 years.

With those figures, it calculated Exxon's costs at between $421 million and $524 million in material prepared for the hearing.

At the request of The Associated Press, JMW Settlements Inc., of Washington, a national company that specializes in writing deferred payment settlements of law suits, calculated that it would charge Exxon $527.3 million for an annuity that would make $785 million in deferred

'Major' change: poll tax dies in Britain

LONDON — Prime Minister John Major's government on Thursday announced the death of the poll tax, in an abrupt U-turn from the policies of his former mentor Margaret Thatcher.

"The public has not been persuaded that the charge is fair," Environment Secretary Michael Heseltine told the House of Commons.

The tax sparked a riot in London a year ago and campaigns of organized disobedience, cost the Conservatives two formerly "safe" seats in special Parliamentary elections and threatened to drag them to defeat in the next general election.

Opposition legislators in the House of Commons howled with derision as the government acknowledged finally that the flagship policy of Mrs. Thatcher's third term as prime minister had failed.

"We have just heard the most complete capitulation, the most startling U-turn, and the most shameless abandonment of consistency and principle in modern political history," declared Labor Party spokesman Bryan Gould.

Scraping the poll tax was Major's biggest retreat yet from Thatcherism, the former prime minister's philosophy of free markets, individual initiative and reduced state spending.

Major has also mended fences with the rest of the European Community, by raising state benefits to children and trimming tax breaks for the wealthiest Britains.

Japan helps war cost with $5.7 billion

WASHINGTON — Japan will make a $5.7 billion contribution to the U.S. Treasury on Friday to defray U.S. costs for operation Desert Storm, American and Japanese officials said Thursday.

The announcement, which came shortly after Japanese Foreign Minister Taro Nakayama opened official talks here, was one of several indications that the two countries are determined to overcome recent strains in relations.

During a half hour meeting with Nakayama, President Bush thanked him for Japan's contributions.

Japanese Foreign Ministry spokesman Taizo Watanabe said Bush acknowledged there was some "frustration" in the United States with Japan, but said that resulted mostly from disputes over trade and not the widely reported differences over the Persian Gulf.

The discussions also included the possibility of a U.S.-Japanese summit early next month, possibly in California.

Many in Congress are angry with allied countries that haven't paid yet.

Soviet legislature endorses referendum

MOSCOW — Lawmakers urged national and republic leaders on Thursday to use the recent referendum on preserving the union as a springboard to approving a new treaty to join the republics.

After a day of relatively calm debate, the Supreme Soviet legislature approved an eight-point resolution declaring that "a majority of people (agreed) that the fate of the country's peoples is indivisible, that only through joint efforts will they be able to successfully resolve questions of economic, social and cultural development."

The legislature had scheduled the referendum at the urging of President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

The resolution gave Gorbachev another card in his bid to hold the republics together under a new Union Treaty.

Neither Gorbachev nor his chief foe, Russian Federation President Boris Yeltsin, have commented publicly on the results of Sunday's referendum.

Nine republics, including the huge Russian Federation, took part in the referendum; six boycotted it. More than 82 percent of the eligible voters in the nine republics cast ballots, with about 77 percent voting in favor.

U.S.S.R. corrects clocks after 6 decades

MOSCOW — Red-faced Soviet officials are admitting they haven't kept the correct time in more than six decades, blaming a mistake in the Stalin era when clocks should have been turned back an hour.

As a result, the officials are scrapping the Soviet version of daylight-saving time this summer.

Clocks, however, will still "fall back" an hour in the autumn. All this timekeeping havoc is bound to further baffle a nation that has had its share of confusion for 191.

March 31 is when clocks usually are moved forward an hour for summer time in the Soviet Union, which has 11 time zones.

But the Cabinet of Ministers has decreed that the move won't be made for most of the Soviet Union — the huge Russian Federation, which includes Moscow; Armenia; Azerbaijan; Byelorussia; Turkmenia and the Ukraine.

The republics of Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania and Moldavia, however, will follow their rebellious tradition and move their clocks ahead as before.

Americans don't need visas for Poland

WASHINGTON — Polish President Lech Walesa announced Thursday that Americans will no longer need visas to visit his country and appealed to them to do business in his economically struggling nation.

Walesa, 47, came to Capitol Hill to ask for help as his country attempts to transform its economy from a state-controlled enterprise to a free-market system. He made the visa announcement in a closed meeting of the House Foreign Affairs Committee and confirmed it later to reporters.

"As of the 15th of April, there are not going to be any visas for all Americans coming to Poland," Walesa said. "No problems for their arrival. Poland will be freely open to all American citizens."

Poland is following the lead of Hungary, Czechoslovakia and Bulgaria, other Eastern European nations that have lifted most visa requirements for Americans, the department said. Walesa also laid red and white roses on the casket of Ignace Jan Paderewski, the Polish statesman and pianist who died in the United States on June 29, 1941.

Snow gives boost to spring skiing

By BILL DERMODY
Universe Staff Writer

Spring officially started Wednesday at 8:02 p.m., and snow started falling on the BYU campus just a few hours later Thursday morning.

It was the second such snowfall in 48 hours.

Although most of the snow on campus had melted by early evening, it remained in the mountains.

The new snow added to a snow-pack that should provide for excellent spring skiing conditions for Utah skiers.

Local weather forecasts are predicting more snow and rain today. Tomorrow's high temperature will be in the 50s.

The low will be between 30 and 35 degrees.

Forecasters also say it will be mostly cloudy.

Snow is more likely at higher altitudes.

During the 48 hour period beginning Tuesday night, Sundance reported the most new snow with 27 inches.

Other Utah ski areas reported between 10 and 23 inches during the same period.

All areas reported excellent skiing conditions.

Alta, Brighton, Snowbird and Solitude resorts are all reporting snow depths of more than 100 inches.

Alta ski resort reported the deepest base with 124 inches at mid-mountain.

These areas all predict good snow cover to last the rest of the skiing season.

"We're in really good shape for spring skiing right now," said Clayton Roundy, a member of the Sundance Ski Patrol.

In fact, Roundy said this year's spring skiing would probably be better than this year's wintertime skiing.

"Conditions now are probably the best they've been all year, to be perfectly honest," Roundy said.

"You really couldn't ask for better conditions for this time of year," Roundy said.

Although ski conditions are favorable, they will not affect the closing dates already set by Utah resorts.

"Most resorts have insurance that is seasonal.

"This requires them to set a closing date in advance.

"That's when the season ends, no matter how much snow there is," Roundy said.

Sundance ski resort, which is owned by actor Robert Redford, is scheduled to close on March 31.

"That's about the time we lose the local market, and it's just not profitable to stay open," Roundy said.

The state's northern areas, such as Alta ski resort, will close on April 21.

UPS distribution will begin to use natural gas vehicles

By A. BEN CROUCH
Universe Staff Writer

United Parcel Service, better known as UPS, has announced the use of natural gas in many of its vehicles.

UPS began a two-year alternative fuel test in late 1989, in conjunction with Brooklyn Union Gas Company of New York.

The project compared the fuel emissions and operational data from 10 UPS delivery vans converted to run on natural gas with a group of 10 gasoline-powered vans.

When the natural gas vehicles were compared with gasoline vehicles, it was found that two primary smog elements, nitrogen oxide and non-methane hydrocarbons, were reduced by 22 percent and 9 percent, respectively, in natural gas vehicles.

Natural gas, because it is stored in a sealed system, was also shown to have less evaporative emissions.

In a recent news release, New York City Mayor David N. Dinkins responded to the UPS changes in his city by saying, "We are delighted with the results of United Parcel Service's testing program and hope it will encourage other fleets to convert to cleaner burning fuels."

Gaylen Pickett, an area manager for Utah, said tests are still being conducted. The date Utah receives the new systems will depend on the test results, "if they work out well and just how cost effective they are."

"The people directly involved in this test - the drivers, mechanics and supervisors - have been very positive about the natural gas vehicles," said Don Parkinson, UPS Automotive Engineering manager.

Provo Crisis Line needs good volunteer listeners

By JENNIFER DERMODY
Universe Staff Writer

Volunteers are needed at the Provo Crisis Line to help people combat problems ranging from thoughts of suicide to loneliness.

Lorri Hirst, director for United Way Volunteer Center, said "The Crisis Line needs dedicated men and women who care about helping others, who are good listeners and are non-judgmental.

"The volunteers need to be at least 18 years old, and previous experience working in this type of situation would be helpful, but it's not necessary," Hirst said.

Janet Davis, director of the Crisis Line, said, "The Crisis Line needs a wide range of volunteer ages. It's not just limited to students."

Davis said the only other requirement is that volunteers need to be mature enough to cope with the stress of crisis work.

Volunteers commit to a three-hour weekly shift, preferably for eight months, Hirst said.

Davis said volunteers will receive eight hours of training before they begin their weekly shifts.

At training sessions, which will begin April 3, volunteers will be taught about other community programs to which callers can be referred.

"We are really trying to emphasize our referral service," Davis said.

If people have a problem, the Crisis Line can tell them where to go in the community for help.

Last year, the Crisis Line received more than 6,000 calls. Davis said,

"The Crisis Line is very necessary for lonely people. It is also important for people experiencing grief or contemplating suicide. A lot of people call when their therapist isn't available," she said.

Crisis Line hours are from 5 p.m. to 2 a.m. Davis said they hope to get enough volunteers to have the Crisis Line open 24 hours, which will require 60 to 120 people.

To become a volunteer for the Crisis Line call 226-2257. People who feel they need to talk to someone can call the Crisis Line at 226-4433.

BYU rips Aztecs for 6-3 victory

by JODY NIELSEN
Universe Sports Writer

The BYU women's tennis team increased their impressive season record to 14-2 after a victory over the San Diego State University Aztecs Thursday, 6-3.

"It was a real knock down dragout affair," said BYU coach Ann Valentine.

The Cougars finished off the singles matches winning four of the six played, putting them in a good position going into doubles.

It was an important victory for BYU, ranked No. 16 nationally, as SDSU is ranked No. 17 and a WAC title challenger.

SDSU knocked off Kentucky last week, 8-1, which is ranked No. 12 in the nation.

This concerned Valentine somewhat as BYU was defeated by Kentucky, 5-4, in February. Speaking of the Aztecs, she said, "I've never seen such a tall group of athletes."

Jennifer Holmes was at the No. 1 position for BYU but was defeated by Tanya Brandt, 6-4, 7-6 (7-5). At one point in the second set Holmes was down 4-5 and won the next two games to make the score 6-5. Unfortunately Brandt fired up to take the victory by winning the following two games. Holmes hung in there well," Valentine said.

Holmes said of Brandt, "She took a pace off (the ball). She knew I had pace."

Holmes' match against Brandt lasted more than two hours. "Since the points were so long I lost my energy," she said.

Evica Koljanin took a victory over Eva Olivarez, 4-6, 6-2, 6-2. "Olivarez was consistent," Koljanin said. "I played better than I have in the last few matches."

"Evvy played one of her finer singles matches against Olivarez," Valentine said. "Olivarez is an excellent player."

At No. 3 for the Cougars, Sarah Mugnaini defeated Paige Hammond in straight sets, 6-0, 6-3.

"Sarah played super against SDSU," Valentine said.

Also adding a victory to the BYU score was Federica Lentini, who beat Sue Hawke, 6-4, 6-1.

Maddy Diekmann contributed to the Cougar victory when she defeated Tanya Lauer, 6-3, 6-1.

"Everybody had a hand in the win," Valentine said.

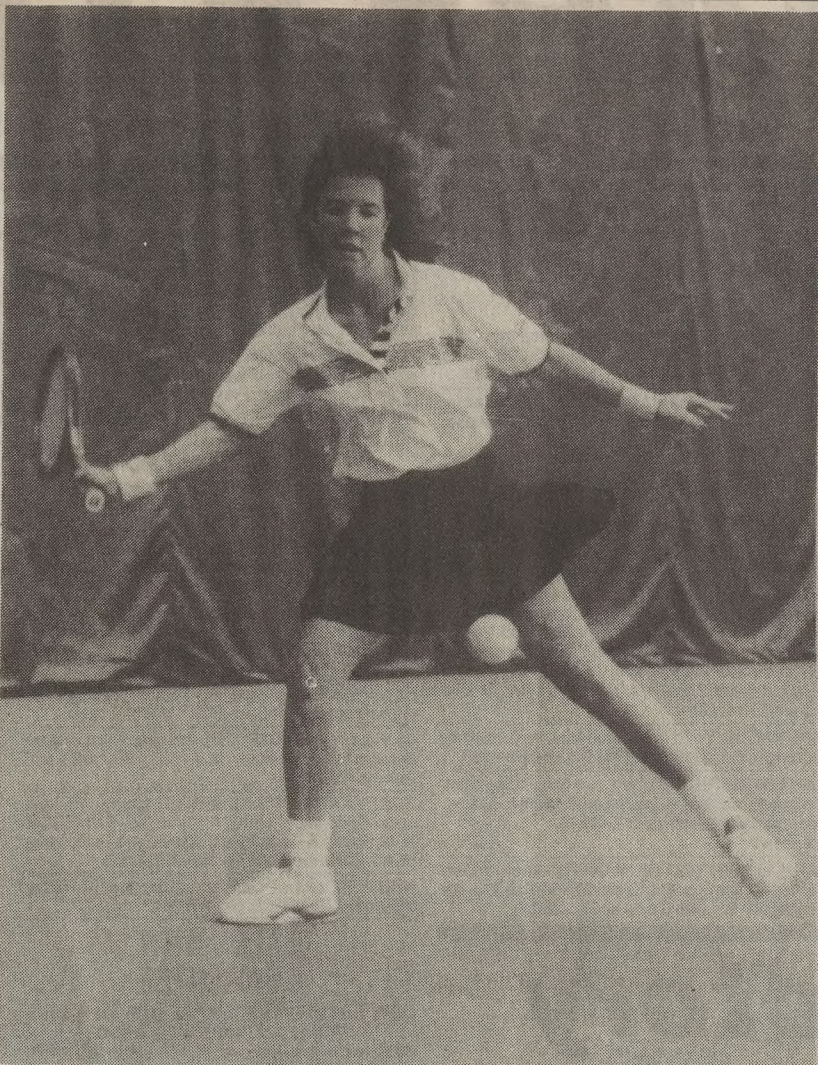

BYU dominated in doubles winning two of the three matches.

Koljanin and Mugnaini at No. 1 for BYU knocked off the No. 13 doubles team in the nation of Brandt and Nicole Storto, 2-6, 6-4, 6-4.

"This was a big win for Koljanin and Mugnaini," Valentine said. "It will help them get ranked."

"The Cougars played with as much intensity as I've ever seen them play," Valentine said. "They are pulling themselves up by the boot straps to arise to the occasions."

BYU next takes on the University of Miami Tuesday in Miami, Fla.

Tracksters at away meets

By SHANNON LANDEN
Universe Sports Writer

BYU's men's and women's track teams will split up this week to compete in Austin, Texas and Tempe, Ariz. in the first team scored meets of the season.

The men compete in a four-way meet at the University of Texas at Austin during a two-day competition starting today.

BYU men's track coach Willard Hirschi said BYU and Texas are both balanced teams with many talented athletes.

"Texas is one of the strongest teams in the NCAA," Hirschi said, "although we've beaten them in the last couple of years in the national standings."

The meet will be divided into two separate competitions.

On Friday, all of the athletes from the four schools will compete in all of the events on a non-scored basis. On Saturday, each school will select its two best athletes in each track event to represent them in the total team scoring.

Baseball team hosts Mesa for a pair of double headers

by JEANA STARR
Universe Sports Writer

The BYU men's baseball team will take on the Mesa State Mavericks in a pair of doubleheaders today and Saturday in Provo, weather permitting.

The Cougars, 7-7, hope to continue their winning streak after sweeping three out of four games over the weekend against Regis College.

Several of the BYU players have been playing well. Rob Jensen and Dave Madsen have been doing an excellent job pitching.

Dave Madsen leads the Cougars in hitting with a .471 average followed closely by catcher Blaine Filne batting .444. Rob Jensen (2-2, 2-38) and Mike Nielsen (2-1, 9-00) will pitch Friday's games.

Dave Madsen (2-1, 4-60) will start his first game off for the Cougars on Saturday.

Netters host No. 7 Bears on Saturday

by JODY NIELSEN
Universe Sports Writer

Ranked No. 7 in the Nation, the Cal-Berkeley Bears come to BYU with high credentials to take on the Cougars' tennis team Saturday.

The Bears have a 3-1 record this season and have two nationally ranked players, Matt Lucena at No. 8 and Bent-Ove Pedersen at No. 45.

"They are one of the top tennis powers in collegiate tennis," said BYU coach Jim Osborne. The Cougars had a rough start this season but have increased their season record to 14-2.

"We're going to have to really play well to knock them off," Osborne said. BYU is hoping the bad weather in California has held Cal-Berkeley back so they are not quite as sharp, he said.

"The season is young for Cal-Berkeley," Osborne said. "If we are going to beat them, now is the time."

Osborne said, the Cougars have three strong doubles teams now, and hopefully we'll win a few singles matches to get us into the doubles."

Headman Vandecasteele has been rotating back and forth between the No. 1 and 2 singles position and is coming off two straight wins against the State and Boise State.

After the match against Cal-Berkeley on Saturday, the Cougars will continue their road trip to Concord against San Jose State on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday BYU will play on Nevada-Reno and the Air Force Academy respectively.

His eyes are squinty and his ears are too big, but he has very attractive symphony tickets.

Tickets to the symphony can overcome many an imperfection. Especially when you consider an evening of Broadway's most enchanting musicals by such composers as Cole Porter and Rodgers and Hart. It's even possible that your date's eyes could start to appear less squinty. And his oversized ears might suddenly appear alluring enough to nibble on.

Depression hits 1 out of 5 people

CORDY WEST
Universe Staff Writer

Depression, referred to as the "cold of mental health" by the psychological community, is a problem that is affecting one out of five people — one out of seven depressed people will commit suicide.

Depression can effect anyone from society and income level, said Tia Davis, president of the ESI Management Group.

Depression usually occurs when an individual has experienced a major change in lifestyle. The body cycle to adjust as quickly, and the person falls into depression.

Changes such as the death of a loved one, pressures from work or family, or giving birth, might make it difficult for a person to cope, she said.

Someone who is unhappy with himself or what he is doing may see other people being happy and become further depressed, Davis said.

Feeling wanted and useful can mean different things for different people. A workaholic will feel he is being useful when he is busiest; others will feel they are overworked and become depressed. Still others will be happiest when they are able to express their creativity.

"There is a huge stigma surrounding depression. It is not a personal weakness that can be hidden. People are ashamed to talk about it because of their fear of losing their jobs and out of concern for their families," Davis said.

Several methods may be used to overcome an episode of depression, including exercise.

"There is a theory that exercise will increase the endorphins in the body. Endorphins are naturally occurring chemicals that stimulate the nerves in the brain to produce a euphoria, a pain-relieving affect," said Pat Vehrs, a doctoral student of exercise psychology.

Tests show that people who are depressed have a low rate of endorphins. Lights can also affect the body's chemistry. Keeping lots of lights on in the home will help a depressed person.

Anti-depressants in cooperation with therapy are also an effective tool in combating depression.

Speaker likens marketing to war

HARIS STAPLES
Universe Staff Writer

In today's world, the business, communications and marketing industries must compete as if they are in a battlefield, said Al Ries, founder and chairman of Trout and Ries, a Connecticut marketing firm.

Ries told BYU students at a Communications Executive Symposium today that marketing products is like war. He cited the Pepsi-Cola and Coca-Cola advertising war as an example.

"Years ago, companies fought with military weapons on a narrow front, but most businesses try to attack a wide front," Ries said. "Businesses should narrow their focus and try to be all things to all people."

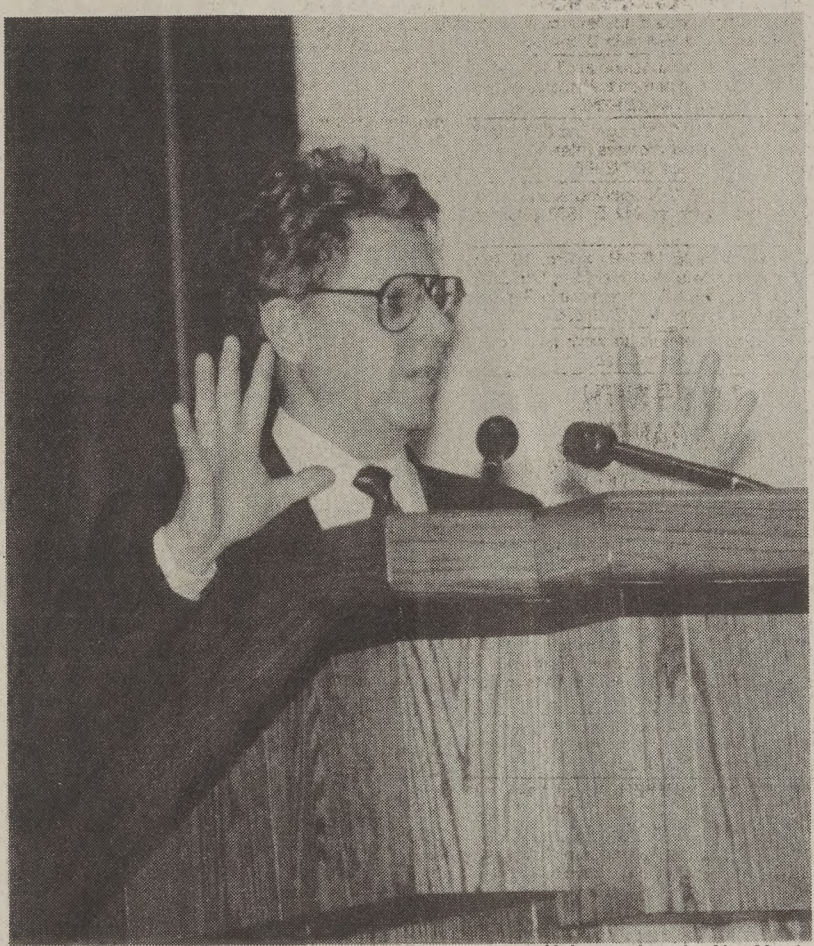

Ries said Adidas making cologne in connection to tennis shoes and Bic making safety razors and pens are examples of companies trying to be all things to all people.

In 1978, 7-Up had a 5.6 percent share of the market, but after it added Diet 7-Up and Diet 7-Up, the company's share went up to only a 3.4 percent share, Ries said. "The problem was the company should have developed a new product instead of extending its front."

Ries used a slide presentation to illustrate that those who do things differently are remembered and more successful. Charles Lindbergh is remembered as the first to fly solo across the Atlantic Ocean, but nobody remembers the person who flew across seven times, though he might have been a better pilot, he said.

Ries said companies should find a strategy that will work with the customer, and then build that tactic into a strategy.

He said Burger King used this tactic against McDonald's when it developed the campaign, "Grow up to the flame-broiled taste of Burger King."

These payments begin next year and continue through 2001. The company would be authorized to place that "contract today," said James P. Pappas, vice president of JMW.

Pappas said the figure includes a payment for his company and two large insurance company underwriters.

The annuity, most often sold by insurance companies, is used to set deferred payments. It costs less to buy than the payments it provides because the underwriter invests the original amount and uses the interest to meet the payments and make a profit.

In fact, Exxon could essentially save the amount of that profit by financing its own annuity internally.

KUWAIT

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein won the support of many Palestinians with his Scud missile attacks on Israel and his repeated demands for a Palestinian homeland.

Intent on revenge, Kuwaiti security forces have used lighted cigarettes and lighters to burn people, and knives to carve words into the flesh of prisoners, Whitley said.

In one case, a captured Iraqi pilot was fatally shot in the head by Kuwaiti security forces in the early days of March, Whitley said.

A Palestinian detainee since released said he witnessed the shooting, Whitley added. He said there were reports that hospital rooms were being used as interrogation and punishment centers by security forces.

These forces have posted an armed guard at Murbarak al-Kabeer Hospital for the past two weeks and doctors say prisoners are held there.

Helicopters to assist in Alaska rescues

By ROGER ELLIS
Universe Staff Writer

Rocky Mountain Helicopters Inc. has signed a new contract to provide law enforcement and search and rescue operations support in the Denali National Park-Mount McKinley area of Talkeetna, Alaska.

The company will use an Aerospace Lama SA 315B helicopter.

Spike Kinghorn, marketing director for RMH, said the Lama is a special high-altitude helicopter designed for use in the mountains of Europe.

The Lama should be well-suited for search and rescue operations in Denali National Park area because Mount McKinley is the highest mountain in the United States.

"This will be the first year the Park Service will have one (a Lama) under contract," Kinghorn said.

Annette Mecham of RMH said the contract is for three years but must be renewed each year.

The new contract is similar to a government contract in Mescalero, N.M., which involves fire suppression support.

"We ended up with three helicopters down there last year because of forest fires," Kinghorn said.

Kinghorn said the two contracts combined could provide more than $500,000 in revenues for the company over the next three years.

RMH employs 800 people nationally, 200 of whom are in Provo offices. The company also has offices in California and South Carolina.

The Provo offices include training and logistics, along with maintenance and other facilities.

RMH has a fleet of 120 aircraft. However, it does not have any search and rescue contracts in the Provo area now, Mecham said.

BYU, WSU to cheer, dance at Jazz game

By MARJORIE ALLRED
Universe Staff Writer

For the second year in a row, the BYU cheer squad will perform at the half-time game for professional basketball. The squad, together with the Weber State cheer squad, will be in charge of the halftime show at the Jazz vs. Milwaukee game tonight.

The BYU squad performed during a halftime show last year for the Jazz and was invited back again this year, said Joe Seeger, the cheer squad coach. The routine both squads will do is one BYU audiences have already seen at the Cougar Classic against Eastern Kentucky.

The routine has been made more difficult with more stunts, said cheerleader Lori Jones, 19, a sophomore from Roanoke Rapids, N.C., majoring in family, home and social sciences. The routine will also be done to "Dueling Banjos," a medley of banjo music, she said.

Having the BYU squad perform the routine with Weber State happened almost by coincidence, Seeger said.

BYU cheer squad director Lisa Arbon has done work with the cheer advisor at Weber, and they decided to get together to share some cheers and ideas, he said.

At that reunion, the idea for a halftime show just evolved.

The squads have practiced a few times and the routine seems to be coming together well, Seeger said. The squads will go to the Salt Palace early to run through the show a couple times to make sure they're both integrated, he said.

Education lab 'best of kind'

By GEOFFREY M. THATCHER
Universe Staff Writer

BYU's new Technology Education Laboratory, which opened this week, has been heralded as "awesome, the best of its kind in the country and the future in secondary education labs."

Loren Martin, a BYU associate professor of industrial education, said the lab will be used by industrial education majors to prepare them as teachers in secondary schools. The lab is Martin's brain child, but he said he borrowed ideas for the lab from secondary school labs in Kansas and Colorado. Work on the lab, located in the William H. Snell Building, began last May and was completed about a week ago, but Martin said a few finishing touches are left to do. The lab, with its new carpet and wallpaper and posters decorating the walls, doesn't look like most conventional secondary education workshops. Martin said with this new lab BYU is three to five years ahead of other universities in technology education.

He said the trend will be toward more high-tech labs than the conventional workshops. The lab features some of the latest technology available to schools including lasers, fiber optics, video production, robot programming, satellite electronics and a wind tunnel for aerodynamic experiments.

Ruth Griggs, 23, a senior majoring in industrial education from St. Louis, Mo. said, "(The lab) is preparing me to be a better teacher."

She said she has spent at least 20 hours a week helping to get the lab ready to open. Lab funding was provided by various donations, including business and state grants and BYU donations.

World acclaimed pianist to play at BYU tonight

By SALLIE LARSEN
Universe Staff Writer

An internationally acclaimed concert pianist will present a BYU Performing Arts Series concert tonight.

Fredrick Moyer, a Gina Bachauer Memorial Award winner, began his debut as a performing pianist at Carnegie Hall in 1982. Since then, his career has grown steadily to include appearances with many major orchestras including the Philadelphia, Cleveland and Minnesota Orchestras as well as the Boston Symphony and the Boston Pops.

"Moyer is a first-class pianist," said critics at The New York Times. "His playing is clean, unmannered and full of ideas and intelligence."

Other critics from around the country have claimed Moyer to be a "born pianist."

Moyer said he likes to think of himself as knowing and loving many different parts of music. "At this point in my career I want to be thought of as a non-specialist," he said. "I want to enjoy the fruits of the entire repertoire, not just part of it."

Last year Moyer toured South America, Germany and the Soviet Union, adding to his list of performances in Asia, Australia and

FREDRICK MOYER

Greece. Moyer has a repertoire of GM recordings that cover 12 different composers. One of those recordings involves the first classical compact disc for solo piano, one of very few of its kind.

Moyer has a wide-ranging interest in the entire scope of the piano repertoire.

extra-curricular event for the BYU cheerleaders, Seeger said, although the squad enjoys doing it.

Greg Featherstone, 23, a sophomore from Salt Lake City majoring in public relations, said he was excited about performing at the Salt Palace. The crowd shouldn't intimidate the BYU squad since the Marriott Center holds almost twice as many fans as the Salt Palace.

The squads have practiced a few times and the routine seems to be coming together well, Seeger said. The squads will go to the Salt Palace early to run through the show a couple times to make sure they're both integrated, he said.
